

RIGHTS FOR PARTIES TO PRE – TRIAL CONFERENCE(PTC)

Right of Respect for objectives :

- The "Right of Respect for Objectives" is a fundamental principle in the attorney-client relationship. It refers to the client's right to have their legitimate objectives and interests respected and pursued by their attorney. Clients have the right to make decisions about their legal matters based on their own objectives and goals. Attorneys should respect and support these decisions, provided they are legal and ethical.
- Clients have the right to be fully informed about their legal options, potential outcomes, risks, and consequences. Attorneys should provide clients with the information they need to make informed choices. Attorneys must maintain the confidentiality of their clients' objectives and information. This means not disclosing client objectives to third parties without the client's consent, except as required by law or professional ethics.
- Attorneys have an obligation to provide conflict-free representation. This means they cannot represent clients whose objectives conflict with the interests of other clients they represent.
